Farmers Union Improvements

The local branch of the Farmers Union this week began extensive improvements. Whitney & Evans are on the job and are first constructing a model office room, 8x12 feet, in the front of the feed and ware room just adjoining the old officers quarters. Here Manager Wade will not only direct operations of the extensive mercantile business, but will manipulate the wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company. The store will be overhauled throughout, a new front put in, new floors, painted, papered, etc.

Dick & Chamberlin Still At It

We are still grinding away. As is generally known, the Press editor is obliged to lay down the pencil, and we are now corresponding with about twenty-five men who have made enquiry about the business here.

It is expected that a deal will be made soon. The office did a splendid business last year, considering the inefficient management, and it is with much regret that we are unable to continue the work.

MADE TARGETS FOR ENEMY

Chinese Soldiers in Battle of Ping Yang All Opened Parasols When It Rained.

No one who has studied the military methods of China will be surprised to learn that "shells" of painted wood have been picked up in the German concession at Hankow. This is truly Chinese. Not so very long ago each soldier was supplied with an oilcloth parasol, and a fan which he tucked up his sleeve. During the battle of Ping Yang, when the rain came on, the parasols were opened and the enemy found the men easy targets, especially as each one wore a large white disk bearing the number of his regiment on his breast and back.

At the arsenal at Nankin it was once decided to shorten a Krupp cannon which had arrived there because it was too long, and to make "solid shells" which would not burst. Green sprouts were also seen on the logs from which gun stocks were to be made. But the "limit," as one may say, was reached at Hankow when an Austrian warship entered the port and saluted the fort. The Chinese attempted to return the courtesy, but stopped short after five or six discharges. As the Chinese commander afterward explained, "When the third artilleryman had been killed we decided to stop firing."

Real "Tumblers."

Originally a tumbler was far from what it is today, and its true meaning has been lost in the many graceful forms in which it is to be seen. What a "tumbler" really is may be inferred from an extract from a gentleman's diary, written in 1803, which also throws light upon the social customs of the times. The entry is as follows: "Had a few friends to dinner. Tried my new tumbling-glasses. Very successful; all got drunk early." These tumbling-glasses, soon called "tumblers" for short, were made with a round or pointed bottom so that they could not be set down when they contained liquids without falling over and spilling their contents. They were made as a sort of joke to conduce to rapid drinking.

Perfume Compounding an Art.

The compounding of perfumes is a distinct branch of chemistry—a perfume maker may be regarded as an artist of chemistry, blending his ingredients with the care of one and the taste and skill of the other profession. Almost all perfumes have as a basis ambergris or civet, and while these materials are most necessary, great care must be exercised in their use, for a grain too much will make the perfume distressingly irritating to the user. The same is true of many combinations of scents, such combinations even producing hysteria in a mild or severe form. If indulged in at all but one distinct scent should be used.

Her Idea of Americans.

A little highland Scotch girl had looked forward eagerly to the coming of an American cousin. She had never seen an American, but she had her own ideas about them. Her mother had to remonstrate with her for looking so hard at their guest after the American girl had arrived.

"It is very rude," she said. "Why do you look at her like that?"

"But, mother, her hair is lighter than mine."

"Yes."

"And her skin is white."

"Yes, but what of it?"

"I always thought that Americans were black."

The American Goose.

The adoption of the eagle as a national emblem by the United States may be all right, but it might have been still better to adopt the goose. We have never heard of the eagle doing anything great, but last month a goose walked into a church in Illinois during the services and drove half the congregation outdoors before she got out herself, by flying through a window. An old gander, when thoroughly mad, is more dangerous than a dog.

Never Drink Water.

In Lower California a large number of the smaller desert mammals never drink water, according to American scientists who have recently visited the peninsula. They live and thrive on dry seeds and scraps of vegetation in places where the heat and aridity are excessive without ever touching their lips to water, and it has even been found impossible to teach some of them to take water in captivity.

Gate Between Two Rooms.

It proved a blessing in one house. It is fastened in the doorway, between the nursery and "mother's room." There are times when the mother likes to watch the children without being right among them. Often sewing or writing may be done more easily with the gate between the mother and the little ones.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Not to Be Thought Of.

"My dear," he feebly said, after they had permitted her to go to him after the operation, "I shall not recover. They think I will, but they are mistaken. I feel it. I am going to die." "No, no, John!" she cried. "Don't say that! You mustn't die! I haven't a thing that is fit to wear to a funeral."—Judge.

CAN'T BAR ALL THE DIVORCED

Monarchs of Great Britain and Russia Find They Must Modify Their Ideas.

Queen Mary on her husband's accession to the throne caused it to be known that she intended to revive the rules and regulations of Queen Victoria. She even went a step further, says the Metropolitan, and intimated that the men concerned in divorce cases, as respondents or as respondents, would be regarded with disfavor in the highest quarters.

Queen Victoria never visited her displeasures on the men implicated in divorce cases, save in the solitary instance of Sir Charles Dilke. Indeed several of her most famous and most trusted ministers, such as, for instance, Lord Melbourne, Lord Palmerston and the now octogenarian Lord Llandaff, were mixed up in all sorts of divorce cases, without ever forfeiting either their office or her good will.

Both King George and Queen Mary, however, found that it was quite impossible to put their avowed intentions into practice. They could not exclude divorced women from their court unless they barred therefrom the king's own first cousins, Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia and Princess Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, as well as a host of other royal and imperial foreign personages more or less closely related to them by ties of blood.

In Russia divorce was condemned formerly both by the court and by society. Moreover, it was extremely difficult to accomplish, being granted only on the grounds which would suffice to secure a decree of nullity from English and American tribunals, or else for infidelity. But in the latter case the legal conditions were exacting and the cost of a suit so expensive that demands for the dissolution of marriage ties were few and far between.

Now, however, the situation has entirely changed. Divorces have become frequent in Russian society, and despite the objections of the emperor and of his Hessian born but English bred consort, the court has had to open its doors. Thus the wife of General Soukhomlinov, the minister of war, one of the most popular figures at the court of St. Petersburg and in the great world on the banks of the Neva, was first married to M. de Butewitch, with whom her union was legally and ecclesiastically severed in 1909.

Countess Witte, wife of the former premier who represented Russia at the peace conference at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1905, and who is still a minister of state, is also a divorcee and is received at court. Moreover, there are a number of divorces in the imperial family itself, something wholly unknown until the present reign.

Nile and Lake Once Connected.

Geologists are not confined to the testimony of fossils in ascertaining the changes that have taken place on the earth's surface; sometimes living animals are equally good as evidence. In the center of the vast and almost unexplored part of Africa south of the Sahara lies Lake Chad, which just now is the goal of many scientific expeditions. In several parts of this lake there have been found specimens of a fresh water shrimp of a variety found nowhere else except in the Nile. Seeds may be carried by birds for long distances, but the eggs of this shrimp are too fragile for this. The conclusion is that there must at some time, not too far away as geologists reckon, have been a junction between Lake Chad and the Nile or at least that the two must have been close enough so that in time of flood the waters mingled. Now they are separated by many hundreds of miles of desert. This has been imperfectly explored, but it is known that for a thousand miles or more to the east of the lake there extends a series of depressions that might easily be the bed of an ancient arm of the lake. This region is almost flat, and the lake even now has a habit of shrinking for miles from its banks during the dry season. Possibly engineers of the future may reopen the old course.

Questioner Floored.

One of the members of the school committee undertook to sharpen up the wits of the boys by propounding the following question:

"If I had a mince pie and should give two-twelfths to John, two-twelfths to Isaac, two-twelfths to Harry, and should keep half the pie for myself, what would there be left?"

There was a profound study among the boys, but finally one lad held up his hand as a signal that he was ready to answer.

"Well, sir, what would there be left? Speak up loud so that all can hear," said the committee man.

"The plate," shouted the hopeful fellow.

The committee man turned red in the face, while the other members roared aloud.

His Specialty.

"I like a very sensitive horse for hunting."

"Why do you prefer a sensitive one?"

"Because he naturally is quick to take a fence."

Not Always.

"It is always wise," said the sage one, "never to take a step without attaching weight to it."

"But," objected the foolish one, "that is what the convict with chain and ball does."

HOME LIFE IN CHINA

LIVING IN CLOSE QUARTERS

HOME, as in all civilized countries, forms the very heart and center of the life of China. Population being so much greater there than in any other country, it follows that the average home must occupy very limited quarters. But the natives of China have learned to make a real abiding place in the smallest possible space, so that a single room with mud floor and sometimes a low attic overhead, where the children sleep, forms the extent of great numbers of homes among the respectable people of that country.

In any small village or hamlet in central China you will find the one or two streets lined on either side with long rows of one-story buildings, with roofs of thatch or tiles. There may be a half dozen houses under one long roof, but partitions extending the whole width of the building separate them from one another. China is full of villages, as the farmers group their dwellings close together for safety. A square hole half-way up the front wall, covered with light paper or else transparent oyster shells, answers for a window. This, with the front door, which usually stands open, in pleasant weather, admits the light and air into the abode. The house itself is very poorly constructed, and it is made of a single layer of adobe bricks piled up on their thin edges and plastered over on the outside.

There are very few really substantial buildings in the whole of China except an occasional temple. But such are the homes where are born and reared large families of children and where parents and grandparents live from one generation to another. Perhaps the ancestors of the grandfather have lived in this very spot for hundreds of years! The house may have been torn down and rebuilt many times, but the sacredness of home has never been removed from it. It is very likely, too, that some of these small, one or two roomed abodes have been the birthplaces of some of the renowned men of China. It is just here that class distinction, for which China is noted, makes a break and does not recognize caste.

There may be a low lean-to at the back of this dwelling, and in it you will see piles of sticks, dried leaves and bundles of cotton stalks. This is the fuel stored up for the winter months and is sufficient to furnish fire for all the cooking in that large family. Fuel is scarce in China, and every possible material that cannot be used for anything else is utilized for it. You will learn on this visit that of all people on the face of the earth the Chinese take the prize for real practical economy. The stove is made of a few fire bricks so arranged with a hole in the top that a large copper pan can be placed directly over the fuel, and very close to it so that not any of the heat is lost, and the stew, or rice, is almost instantly simmering, and before you are aware the meal is ready for the table. At the table each one's place is not marked by knives, forks, plates, spoons, and so forth, but there is only a pair of chopsticks and a small porcelain spoon for each member of the family. A large dish of steaming stew, in which there are plenty of pieces of pork and different kinds of vegetables, is placed in the middle of each of the square tables, for there are usually several of these, according to the number of the household. Perhaps some dried fish is also there, and before the meal is finished each person is supplied with a heaping bowl of steaming rice. This is held close to the mouth and is literally pushed into it with the chopsticks. All eat with the regularity of clockwork except now and then a hand is reached out to take a spoonful of the stew or a nibble at the dried fish to make the rice go down better.

In a corner of the room the visitor will see a pile of pigskin-covered boxes or trunks, which perhaps reach nearly to the ceiling. In these boxes are most carefully folded and packed away all the best clothing as well as the treasures and heirlooms of the family.

It is in these boxes that all the wedding outfit of the bride is kept. All the jewels, and whatever of worth or beauty the family possesses are found here; these things are only brought out on special occasions, for instance, at weddings or at the New Year's time or on other holidays.

It is remarkable how much these people can stow away in the smallest space and yet not give the appearance of things being crowded. This knack of filling up space always seemed to me as a special gift—an inheritance from a long line of ancestral training; else it could never have been so perfectly developed as is seen in China.

In addition to the numbers in the family we are talking of, there may be seen dogs, cats, and perhaps a family hen or two, walking about in the same room as unconcerned as the others. Among the very low, a pig or two in the house is not an uncommon sight, but in our visit today the members of the swine family are in a box or kept in a hole just outside. There may also be a few birds in cages hanging about to cheer the family with their sweet music.

These homes are anything but neat and comely, but you will be made welcome when you call, although perhaps the chair upon which you are to sit must be wiped off before you dare occupy it.

There will be excuses for the untidiness, the woman perhaps saying that they are too poor to keep clean! But you are there either to see how the other half lives or else to carry some message of teaching them how to better their conditions or perhaps to bring cheer to some forlorn heart, so do not see to much, or notice the unsavory odors that float in from every direction!

Before going to China I had supposed that it was only the rich and well-to-do families who had their daughters' feet cramped, but I soon found that the custom was very general throughout all of central China. In the country as well as in cities, this horrid custom was carried out with nearly all the women.

In the province of Canton, however, this has never been as general among the poor as in other parts, hence this is why you here see only an occasional woman with bound feet. (Nearly all the Chinese here are from the province of Canton.) Farther north the custom is almost universal.

For thousands of years the Chinese have valued education more than anything else. Every little hamlet and village all over that great empire has had its schools where their literature has been taught to boys whose parents have been unable to employ private teachers in the house. The system is not governmental, but schools are subsidized for from private funds. Very often this provision for schools for those unable to pay for an education has been from purely philanthropic motives. In other cases it has been kept up by men of means from a religious standpoint, thinking that by so doing they may gain merit in the next stage of existence. At any rate the sons of the poor as well as of the rich have had more or less of a chance to gain an education.

The prime idea of study with the Chinese is to make as many of the five senses as possible aid in forming the impression of the name and written character upon the mind of the child. The understanding is a matter of a later period and will develop of itself at the proper time. The eyes see the proportions and outline of the character, the mouth or voice is used in repeating its name, and the ear hears the voice and so adds its quota in the brain impression. These characters when first taught to children are always written upon small squares of paper and are felt and handled continually while at study, so that the brain is aided by seeing, voicing, hearing and feeling, all thus helping the mind to receive its gift of material which it will hold till the intellect is ready to make use of it.

The little fellow may not for years to come know the meaning of a single character he learns to repeat with perfect accuracy, but what he has learned can never be effaced from his memory. It is his possession as long as life lasts. In after years, when he begins to read books, and his faculties develop, these same characters will largely explain themselves by their context, and the minds of these children will open and expand in a marvelous manner.

MANURE AS GOOD AS A BANK

Pennsylvania Station Makes Experiment Showing That Fertilizer Should Be Spread at Once.

One of the experiment stations—Pennsylvania—made a valuable experiment with manure. It was found that manure when spread on the field as fast as made suffered little loss of its fertilizing constituents though less than two-fifths of the dry matter of the feed and bedding was recovered in the manure.

Manure that was thrown out and kept in a covered shed lost one-third of its nitrogen, one-fifth of its potash and one-seventh of its phosphoric acid.

Only one-third of the dry matter of food and litter was recovered in the manure. The potash and phosphoric acid probably escaped by seepage of the liquid manure into the clay bottom.

The nitrogen was volatilized and escaped into the air in the form of carbonate of ammonia.

The money value of the fertilizing constituents lost in the covered shed as compared with manure left to be trampled down was equivalent to 2.50 for each steer fed for six months.

Hence it was found that if there is a tight floor and abundant bedding that can be trampled into a compact mass, the manure loses very little, if any, of its fertilizing value so long as the animals remain on it.

Therefore, this method is very much superior to the piling in a covered shed. But when this trampled manure is taken out do not pile it to heat and waste, but haul it at once to the field where plants are waiting for it.

The whole process depends on the complete tramping to exclude the air and to prevent the carbonation of ammonia.

But whenever it is practicable it is better to haul out and spread the manure as fast as it is made for there is less loss of its value lying spread on the land than in any other way.

If the potash and phosphoric acid leach out they will be absorbed and retained by the soil until plants call for them and as there is no fermentation the nitrogen will be retained in the organic matter until nitrification takes place after it is buried in the soil.

CLEAN PLACE FOR MILKING

Separate Rooms Should Be Provided and Care Taken to Exclude Dust and All Odors.

(By WALTER B. LEUTZ.)

Cows should never be milked in the same stable or stall where they are fed if it can possibly be avoided. It will pay to provide a separate room in bad weather and this room should be so arranged that no dust or odors from the barn can enter it. In good weather cows should be milked in the open air.

If cows are milked in the barn where hay and other feeds are kept the mangers should be filled several hours before milking time and the floors well sprinkled just before milking begins.

The main thing is to keep the dirt out of the milk in the first place because when it has once gotten in no amount of straining will take all of it out. Running the milk through a strainer does not mean that it is made clean by the process. Of course the best way is to milk through a strainer into a covered pail as that keeps out the dirt.

Of course most farmers will say that all this trouble is not worth while but it is. That is it is worth while if a man really wants to provide milk that is absolutely clean. Of course if he doesn't care to do this and is willing to send to the market foul and tainted milk nothing is worth while. Just go ahead and milk in any old way and any old place regardless of dust, stable odors or any other contaminating elements, but this never pays in the long run.

Sheep and the Silo.

The value of silage as the cheapest and best succulent for cattle and hogs is fully established.

For sheep and especially for lambs its very cheapness is apt to tempt to its overuse, says Farm and Fireside. The successful feeding of lambs depends largely on their being offered great variety of food while in the yards. They find it for themselves when at pasture. This also applies to ewes while suckling.

Much damage is often done by careless feeding of sour or moldy silage. A few roots, turnips, mangels, beets, good bright timothy or clover hay, with bran and linseed oil meal with their grain ration, are the safe and well proved producers of healthy ewes and prime lambs.

Grading the Swine.

Grade the hogs as to size, thrift and general condition and separate them into two or three lots before beginning to feed them for the market. You thus will realize greater profits from the sale of swine, since each herd will be more uniform in size and condition. Besides, each lot of hogs may be fed more economically, since what meets the needs of some will not meet the needs of all.

Separating Unthrifty Animals.

If you have a bunch of hogs feeding or growing together and one begins to show even slight signs of unthriftiness, separate him from the others at once. It is likely to be good for him, and it will certainly be safer for the other.

For the LITTLE ONES

LEGEND OF THE MISTLETOE

Some Claim Goddesses Kissed All Who Passed Under Plant as Symbol of Love.

(By E. R. GAILLARD.)

According to Scandinavian mythology, Loki (the god of evil) was the sworn enemy of Baldur (the god of light), and tried by every means in his power to kill him, but failed because he was invulnerable to everything that came from earth—air, fire, or water.

Loki, at last, conceived the idea that the mistletoe, springing from neither, would serve his purpose, and, having an arrow made from that wood, he helped Hodi (the blind god of darkness), to aim it, and Baldur fell dead—shot through the heart.

All the gods and goddesses prayed for his restoration to life, and when the prayer was granted it was decreed that the mistletoe should nevermore have power to do harm unless it touched the earth, and the goddess of love was appointed to guard it.

Some legends claim that the goddesses kissed all who passed under the plant as a token that it was no longer a weapon of death, but a symbol of love, while others assert that she exacted a kiss from each as a propitiation, or the bough should be allowed to work harm.

Another reason for the kissing privilege conferred by the plant is said to be that a lovely maiden preferred death to the kisses of an old monk who pursued her, and her prayers for deliverance were answered by transforming her into a mistletoe branch and placing her in a tree.

The monk waited for her return, but rather than that, she clasped the tree and remained clinging to it, leaving the waiting monk to kiss whom-ever he could catch.

The custom of "kissing beneath the mistletoe" is so old that no one knows when or how it originated; but when young people are found selecting the branches that have the most berries on, it is fair to suppose that they know a kiss must be given for each berry plucked, and that the ceremony is never complete until every berry is off the branch.

There was once a common, though mistaken belief that the mistletoe grew on oak trees only, but that was so far from true that the Druids, who held the oak as absolutely sacred because they believed it to represent the One Supreme God, deemed the mistletoe doubly sacred if found on one, and carefully guarded it until the sixth day after the first new moon of each year.

When this time arrived, priests robed in white surrounded the tree and held solemn ceremonies, among which was the sacrifice of two white bulls.

After the ceremonies, a priest in spotless robes ascended the tree and, with a golden knife, cut the mistletoe and let it fall on to a white cloth held by other priests.

The branches were then formally "blessed" and divided among the people who believed the sprays given them to have miraculous powers.

The common belief in the efficacy of the plant was such that it was called all-heal; but according to an old legend, a certain lover searched many days for a specimen growing on an oak tree, that he might secure its branches for the cure of his betrothed, who was sick unto death, but when he found it he touched the sap while cutting the branches, and fell dead near the tree, indicating that the sap was a deadly poison.

The plant thrives in America from New Jersey southward and westward, and those who know it only as a part of Christmas decorations can have little idea of how often it overruns trees to the extent of being a nuisance.

Bullocks in English Church.
At Emmanuel church, Nottingham, England, considerable excitement was caused among the congregation one Sunday by two bullocks entering while the vicar was preaching his sermon. The animals had strayed from their quarters, and, finding the door open, walked in. They went into the baptistry, but the vicar, attracted by the commotion, got in front of the animals, and by gentle and tactful persuasion, drove them out without any damage being done or panic caused.

MELISSA HAD REVENGE

SHE WAS SCOLDED FOR BEING ARRESTED FOR SPEEDING.

Austere Professor When Absent Mind ed Wore Wrong Hat and Telephoned From the Police Station for Her Help.

"No, Melissa," the professor rose with deliberation, "I cannot but feel that my duty to you, my wife, constrains me to forbid the repetition of such a vulgar happening. If you cannot indulge in automobile without incurring the contamination incident to arrest for speeding, I shall reluctantly be compelled to dispose of the car."

He drew himself up imposingly, and left the room with a firm tread; but in the hall his agitation showed itself, for he captured and placed on his head the first hat which came to hand. It happened to be a jaunty toque of soft felt that Melissa had carelessly left on the hall table.

Before the professor had gone ten steps, however, his domestic tribulations had left his mind, and he was deep in the consideration of a difficult problem. Therefore he did not notice the curious glances and amused stares that began to follow him. As he progressed further and further he acquired a following of street boys and newsmen, whose jeers and hoots became louder as their number augmented. Finally his mind, distracted by the noise without, broke from the obscurities of its problem, and he turned to confront external conditions.

The jeers died away and he faced his followers—then broke out laughing. As the professor began to expostulate with his tormentors, a crowd gathered, bringing with it a blue-clad policeman, who speedily made his way to the center of the gathering. The professor turned to him with relief, and began to explain the situation in somewhat intricate English.

The policeman smiled genially. "Drunk again?" said he. You come with me. It'll be ten days or $10 for disturbin' the peace."

He took a firm grip on the professor's arm just above the elbow, and marched him off, protesting.

Meanwhile Melissa, her lord and protector departed, had seated herself in an easy chair to read the morning paper. After awhile she tossed it aside. "He can be just as horrid when he wants to," she complained. Then a smile crept over her face, "and, besides, he forgot that it's my auto, not his," she chuckled.

The telephone bell rang, and she took up the receiver. "Well?"

A meek and quavering voice came over the wire. "Is—ah—is this Melissa?"

"It is."

"I—er—I—I," then with an agonized rush: "Please hurry down in the car and bail me out! I'm in the—ah—police station!"

Preserve Your Dignity.

The way to ward off old age is not to fear it, not to allow one's self to be oppressed by the dread of advancing years. Use only legitimate preventives and avoid trying experiments with preparations not indorsed by physicians. Do not wear toilettes intended for young girls, they only add years to the appearance. Keep up your interest in the young, but do not envy them. Retire with dignity from the struggle, do not pose as your daughter's rival. Above all, surround your life with sweet, true affections which prevent the heart from growing bitter. Do not lose interest in the growing events of the day; do not fall behind the times, and do not harp on other and better days. To those who come to you for advice be always kind and sympathetic. As you advance in years preserve carefully your personal appearance, for once lost it may not be regained save by strenuous effort. Your costumes should be simple and unpretentious, yet graceful. These rules, carefully and sensibly followed, will keep you young and attractive.

The Reminder.

Frederick Townsend Martin, apropos of the extravagances of the idle rich, said at a dinner in New York: "It is bad enough for the rich, who can afford it, to be extravagant, but what of the extravagance of the merely well to do, who can't?"

"How many a poor, struggling broker or lawyer or promoter slaves himself into nervous prostration in order to gratify the extravagant tastes of his wife!"

"I heard of a case in point yesterday. The wife of an overworked promoter said at breakfast:

"Will you post this letter for me, dear? It's to the furrier countermanding my order for that $900 sable and ermine stole. You'll be sure to remember?"

"The tired eyes of the harassed, shabby promoter lit up with joy. He seized a skipping rope that lay with a heap of dolls and toys in a corner, and, going to his wife, he said:

"Here, tie my right hand to my left foot so I won't forget."

More Likely.

"What's the excitement at that street crossing? Some automobile collision?"

"I think not; the crowd's too big for that. Some professional pugilist must have stepped into the saloon at that corner, and they're waiting for him to come out."

The Coughs of Children

They may not cough today, but what about tomorrow? Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. This cough medicine is especially good for children. No anodynes. No alcohol.

Many a child is called dull and stupid when the whole trouble is due to a lazy liver. We firmly believe your own doctor will tell you that an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills, sugar-coated, will do such children a great deal of good. Ask him. Made by the J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

Not Final Farewell.

Lady Mary Wortley Montague once wrote a letter to her lover (whom she afterward married), concluding in the following manner: "There is no condition of life I could not have been happy in with you, so very much I liked you—I may say loved—since it is the last thing I'll ever say to you. This is telling you sincerely my greatest awakens, and now I will oblige you with a new proof of my generosity. I'll never see you more!"

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—Mr. F. O. Gar-diner, Secretary of the Head Herring College, says that these schools have just closed the most successful year in the history of the institution. Facilities and courses of study have been improved until today the Head Colleges are recognized as one of the most efficient chains of schools in the world. Students have the privilege of transferring from one school to another at any time without inconvenience. These schools have no vacations and students may enter at any time.

TRICKS OF DEBATERS

SUBTERFUGES TO WHICH OVER EAGER CONTENDERS RESORT.

Deliberate Misquoting of Authority Sometimes Resorted To—Penalty for Dishonesty in College Debates Is Severe.

Debating has shortcomings, even dangers. It is easy, for example, to manufacture evidence with little likelihood of detection. However, the penalty of such dishonesty when discovered is most severe, a writer in the Century states. In a debate in 1907 one of the speakers deliberately misquoted an authority. An unusually shrewd opponent walked over to the desk of his rival, picked up the book and read the statement exactly as it had been quoted. Then he continued: "Honorable judges, the gentlemen read the sentence as if it were punctuated with a period at this point. As a matter of fact the punctuation is a comma." He then read the final clause, showing the real intent of the authority, which was exactly opposite to the interpretation given by his opponent. The result was disaster for the dishonest debater.

There are still more subtle forms of dishonesty. Dozens of requests pour in from colleges and high schools upon every prominent debating team, offering to buy, rent or borrow material. A typical letter read:

"Dear Sir: We understand that your university debated the question of commission government last spring. We shall be glad to procure a set of the speeches made and will pay any reasonable price."

Unless such dishonesty can be prevented it will soon bring deserved condemnation to an honorable sport. Reputable institutions are refusing either to sell or buy material.

A third form of dishonesty sometimes arises. Coaches too frequently are far more responsible for the argument presented than are the debaters themselves. One debating coach has made a special study of trade unions for ten years. He began in his school debates, followed it out in his college contests, and finally, taking charge of a college team, gave them three carefully prepared speeches to memorize. Thus his students received none of the value which comes of working up a case. They were parrots, nothing more. For this evil there are two possible remedies. Many colleges, among them Stanford, the University of California and Swarthmore, rightly throw the burden of preparation entirely upon the debaters, doing away with all coaching and trusting to the honor of their opponents to do likewise. Still better is reducing the time of preparation from three months to six weeks. Stanford and California pursue this method in their annual Carnot medal debates, which are models of the best debating in the country. The actual debating deteriorates under shorter preparation, but the exercise becomes far less academic and more nearly like the occasions of every day life. Teh debates under this system are contests not of voluminous research but of individual constructive thinking. Above all, this plan places the men upon their own responsibility, and as far as possible eliminates opportunities for dishonesty.

Examine Your Own Prejudices.

Every one is forward to complain of the prejudices that mislead other men or parties, as if he were free, and had none of his own. This being objected on all sides, it is agreed that it is a fault and a hindrance to knowledge. What now is the cure? No other but this, that every man should let alone others' prejudices and examine his own. The only way to remove this great cause of ignorance and error out of the world is for every one impartially to examine himself.—Locke.

Three in One.

"In going through a big wholesale house the other day," said a New Yorker, "I saw something that may be old to you, but was a new one on me."

Profit in Study of Names.

To study out names may often bring a good deal of not only amusement, but positive instruction and education. Try it on your friends, or perhaps, better, your enemies. For then you can prove for yourself the old proverb (hereby invented on the spot). Tell me your name and I can tell you what your ancestors were.

No Blasphemy in Japan.

Blasphemy in Japan is another rude disillusionment for the credulous traveler. Prof. B. H. Chamberlain, in his "Things Japanese," remarks: "The Japanese vocabulary, though extraordinarily rich and constantly growing, is honorably deficient in terms of abuse. It affords absolutely no means of cursing and swearing."

Fostering Talent.

"You refuse to allow your son to study spelling and grammar," said the teacher. "Absolutely," replied Mr. Groucher. "I want him to try his hand at current literature, and I don't propose to spoil his dialect and slang."

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Drier Pictures at the Garden Theatre

$800.00 Worth of Campbell Views to Be on Exhibition There Saturday Afternoon

Last year the Scenic Film Co. visited the Campbell Fruit Growers Union plant and made over 600 feet of films showing the various stages of preparing dried fruit for the market. These views were on exhibition at the great Chicago Land Show last summer and were seen by many thousand people. Mrs. Bertha Rice, who has charge of "Children's Day" at the Garden Theatre every Saturday afternoon, has arranged to show these moving picture scenes of Campbell tomorrow from 1 to 5 o'clock. Many people from here are arranging to go in and see the views. Admittance 5 cents.

Cleland & Kent in the Deschutes Valley

We received this week the first number of the "Terrebonne Oregonian," a new weekly paper established at Terrebonne, Oregon, in the Deschutes Valley, where Messrs. Cleland and Kent went with their families two years ago. The first number of the Oregonian is a splendid looking paper and the big ads indicate that the merchants are "doing things" worth while. The Cleland & Kent Co. have a big four column ad and one-half inches long. In the news column we noticed the names of E. A. Cleland as chairman of a newly organized literary society, and Mrs. Cleland on the program committee. Newly developing countries such as the Deschutes Valley offer large possibilities for young men who are inclined to hustle.

Cheerful Wiggles Elect Officers

The following officers were elected by the Cheerful Wiggles at their meeting last week: Earl Page, President; Courtland Watson, Secretary; Carroll Wilson, Treasurer; Karlton Chamberlin, Captain of the Lookout Committee; Leroy Sharp, Captain of Behavior; Forest Beacock, Button officer. It was decided to have a contest for new scholars, there being two sides, the Reds and the Greens, the losing side to treat the winners to a party. The captain of the Reds is Carroll Wilson and Lloyd Schell is the captain of the Greens.

Ladies' Aid Supper

The Ladies of the Methodist Church held a chicken pie supper on Thursday evening of last week. It was the initiation of the new kitchen and the proceeds were for new cups and saucers. A big crowd attended and ate everything provided. The new cuisine is a model of convenience and the ladies are delighted.

The Question of Glasses

Are they needed or not? The question is easily answered by those who can't see well without them, but for a great many who see well and still suffer from the effect of eye-strain it can only be decided after a careful examination. Such an examination, I am prepared to give you, and an honest opinion as to what is needed. No operation. No drugs. No glasses unless necessary.

We do Job Printing

Printing in Prison

That generally clear-thinking journal, the Marin Tocsin, says:

"Since the law passed by the last session of the Legislature permitting articles used by the state to be manufactured by convict labor has gone into effect the management of the San Quentin Prison has installed a printing plant. The calendars of the Supreme Court have already been printed there and the work has been satisfactory.

"Heretofore this work has been done by the State Printing Office but with convict labor it can be done very much cheaper and much of the printing now done at Sacramento can be done for less cost at the prison. This will result in a great saving to the State as the working force at the State Printing Office can be largely reduced. With the increase of facilities at the prisons all the state printing can be done there, which will eventually result in the abolishment of the office of State Printer. If the prison can turn out work suitable for the Justices of the Supreme Court, there is no logical reason why they should not be allowed to print the text books and election supplies used by the state and counties."

We fear none of your "fears," br'er of the Tocsin.

We know printers, because we are "one of them."

They do the foolish things "betimes," in the name of the Lord, but few of them ever commit a crime; and in the state prisons of California today there are only enough to "get out" the Supreme Court Calendar, which is issued we believe only once every three months and which any "tyro"—not necessarily a "typo"—might be able to manage.—S. F. Star.

Congregational Church

The morning theme for Feb. 4th is "Christ's Legacy." Five minutes talk to the boys and girls. The C. E. meeting will be at six instead of 6:30 and will meet in the social rooms of the church, it being the 31st anniversary of the founding of the great C. E. movement, which has now over 4,000,000 members in all denominations in the world. The evening service at 7:30 will be the installation of the officers and committee chairmen for the year. The president of the county C. E. will be present and speak on "Endeavor Efficiency." Greetings from the State C. E. Union; five of the officers of the International C. E. and others will be read.

GEO. E. ATKINSON, Pastor.

Grange Social Meetings

About thirty-five members of the Orchard City Grange met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Townsend last Tuesday evening, it being their bi-monthly social meeting. Supper was served from 7 to 8 o'clock. A splendid time was enjoyed. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bohnett.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

BUG-GO

Will Clean Your Trees

Makes Bigger Crops and Better Fruit

Bean's Bug-go is a 60 per cent distillate oil emulsion, so perfectly emulsified that it will stand indefinitely, and dilutes readily with cold water. Oil emulsion is the best remedy for brown apricot scale, black scale, greasy scale, and Italian pear scales. It also cleans the trees of moss and lichens, and leaves the bark soft and brown.

You can't make an oil emulsion that will mix so readily as Bean's Bug-go. Home-made emulsion does not remain emulsified and it collects in large drops, without spreading.

For best results, use with caustic soda. A 50-gal bbl. of Bug-go and a 45-lb pail of caustic soda costs but $9.75 f. o. b. San Jose. This will make 625 gallons of spray and will cover from 3 to 4 acres. Discounts—35 cents per bbl. on two to ten bbls; 70 cents per bbl. on ten bbls. or more. Send $1.75 extra for the bbl. It will be refunded when the bbl. is returned in good condition.
